VINEYARD

Since the 13th Century, grapevines have been the only crop cultivated in the Avia Valley, this valley is a liquid landscape. Thermal hot springs and river streams surrounded by historical vineyards in the place where Ribeiro wine originated. Sábrego is the predominant type of soil, comprised of decomposed granite base with a mixture of clay and sand. A soil that takes on different shades and textures and is instrumental in defining different soil profiles in the region.

VITICULTURE

The Ribeiro region is characterized by a continental climate that is softened by the influence from the Atlantic Ocean which provokes great diurnal temperature swings from day to night that favor a slow ripening and preserve the aromatic components in the grapes.
