VINEYARD

Amidst a sea of pine trees in the Segovian countryside, grapevines are rooted in sandy-slate soil. A poor soil that requires the vines to give their best in extreme climactic conditions. For the most part, the grapes come from vines over two centuries-years-old and have passed through several generations of winemakers.

VITICULTURE

Grapes from a selection of plots where the soils mark the radical difference of this environment: the sands and boulders prevented the arrival of phylloxera. A harsh climate, with freezing winters and hot summers, characterize the development of the authentic verdejo. The vines planted centuries ago have a unique genetic diversity.
