TASTING NOTE

Citric and peaches aromas, hints of fennel and the lees. Surprising delicacy. Length in a rested finish with which the character of the authentic Verdejo appears.

VINEYARD

Amidst a sea of pine trees in the Segovian countryside, grapevines are rooted in sandy-slate soil. A poor soil that requires the vines to give their best in extreme climactic conditions. For the most part, the grapes come from vines over two centuries-years-old and have passed through several generations of winemakers.

VINIFICATION

Ossian is the result of assembling the individual vinification of each small plot of ungrafted vines, which are up to 200 years old. Hand-harvest and after a light pressing, the must is transferred to vats and wooden barrels between 228 and 600 liters. Bottled after 9 months of aging on its lees.

FOOD MATCHING

It pairs exceptionally well with roasted pork tenderloin, grilled sea bass in butter sauce, or aged sheep's milk cheeses like Manchego.
